An Die Musik Live Hosts Jazz Innovator JD Walter

Recognized internationally as a fearlessly creative artist, New York vocalist JD Walter's got rhythm to share. Don Heckman of the LA Times said, "He is an original in an art overpopulated with copycats."

Hear him in Baltimore on Saturday, February 6, 2010 at An Die Musik Live. The concert features exciting arrangements and some top-flight improvisation of tunes ranging from Sting's "Message in a Bottle" to the jazz standard "It Never Entered My Mind."

Hotly in demand, Walter appeared last year in Finland, Greece, Mexico and Russia. The celebrated innovator has recorded albums with Dave Liebman, Billy Hart and others as well as half a dozen of his own. In the past two years he released Live in Portugal and the brand new Live at the 55 Bar. He'll be joined onstage at An Die Musik in Baltimore by three popular jazzmen.

Pennsylvania bassist Joshua Davis is known for his unique rhythm-infused style. Internationally respected saxophonist Jeff Antoniuk has played with venerated artists such as Ray Charles and Freddie Hubbard and the next generation of jazz artists such as Marcus Miller and Najee. Acclaimed drummer Frank Russo completes the quartet.

All university jazz professors, these performing and recording artists came together to perform this special Saturday evening concert before teaching an inDepth Jazz Clinic the next day in Washington, DC. The subject, rhythmic improvisation, will be exemplified in the Baltimore concert and taught the next day in the jazz workshops at Mount Vernon Place United Methodist Church. (Students will include adult gifted amateurs and semi-pro instrumentalists and vocalists.)

Stave off the February chill with a warming dose of inspired jazz. Known as an excellent listening room for jazz and other music, An Die Musik is located at 409 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21201. Make reservations for JD Walter and Friends by telephone. Call 410-385- 2638.
